

Second post: screenshot of blogging from The Fascinator

A few days ago I did my first blog post from The Fascinator Desktop. This post is just to show that embedded images are now supported. Next step will be posting a presentation to a blog. After that we'll be looking at repository deposit, and the ability to build complex objects from multiple parts and post/deposit those.

Here's a screenshot of the very slick (yet monochrome) interface that Oliver Lucido has put together:

The screenshot shows a web browser window with the address bar displaying `http://localhost:9997/portal/default/detail//home/sefton/ICE/documents/blog`. The browser's tab bar includes 'Gmail - Err...', 'Twitter / S...', 'Twitter / H...', 'The Fa...', 'Untitled', 'First Post! ...', and 'The Fascin...'. The interface has a 'Home' and 'Views' menu at the top. The main content area is titled 'Second post: screenshot of blogging from The Fascinator'. On the left, there are two panels: 'ACTIONS' with 'Open file', 'Blog to WordPress...', and 'PDF version'; and 'METADATA' with 'Date' (Tue Nov 10 09:20:00 EST 2009), 'Description' (Second post: screenshot of blogging from The Fascinator A few days ago I did my first blog post from...), 'Title' (Second post: screenshot of blogging from The Fascinator), and 'Format' (application/vnd.oasis.opendocument.text). The main area is titled 'BLOG TO WORDPRESS' and contains a 'Blog information' form with fields for 'Blog URL' (http://ptsefton.com/wp-app.php), 'Title' (Second post: screenshot of blogging from), 'Username' (ptsefton), and 'Password' (masked with dots). There are 'Blog' and 'Close' buttons at the bottom of the form. Below the form is a 'PREVIEW' section showing a snippet of the blog post text: 'A few days ago I did my first blog post from The Fascinator Desktop. This post is just to show that embex' and 'Here's a screenshot of the very slick interface that Oliver Lucido has put together:'. The bottom of the window shows a 'Done' button.
